"A monument ^{for} to a fallen soldier".
Patriotism is one of the best feelings that a person can ever have. Patriotism motivates people to love their country and this is wonderful. Everyone should love their country. Why am I saying this? Because I want to tell you about one of the greatest monuments in my beloved country. The name of the monument may seem short, but it keeps many memories about cruel World War II. It's called "A monument for a fallen soldier". It's located in Russian city - Moscow, if I remember right. The monument is located in a place where tourists can freely walk and take some photos of it. The monument is really beautiful. ~~On~~ This monument is a statue of a woman that holds a fallen soldier in her hands. Later we will know that this woman is a mother of a soldier. She has sad expression on her face. This monument is breathtaking because it shows people all of the scary actions in the big war. What can be even worse than knowing that your son died in a war? It's awful to know realise all of the feelings that his mother experienced after his death...

I highly recommend "A monument for a fallen soldier" for foreign tourists. This monument shows one of the saddest actions that our nation experienced in World War II.

The Tank.

There's a really worth-seeing monument devoted to World War II in Surgut, almost at the corner of the city. By its name it's easy to understand what it looks like. The monument is the real-size tank, which is located in the park, where on the May 9th people often leave red flowers in the memory of people, who died in the war, saving our country and fighting for its safety.

This is a great place to visit, especially to do it [?] bringing your children with you. Why? Because local children often climb up the tank and their parents take photos. And, of course, children enjoy imagining driving a real tank, especially boys. I highly recommend this monument to foreign tourists, so they can see almost a real tank and spend time in a beautiful park.

This monument has no name but it represents a russian soldier who saved a little german girl's life.

✓ The monument should be real, not imaginary. Write the name of the monument!

I would like to share some information about some very meaningful monument. I was told about it by my teacher and it truly broke my heart.

So, there is a monument in Germany which is devoted to World War II. It is dedicated to a russian soldier who saved a little german girl from fire. He is holding her tiny body on his big hands which is really amazing.

Honestly, I would really like to visit this place just to look at this monument myself and give some of my appreciation to it. Nothing should be against having a heart of a human, even your nationality. Every single poor kid deserved to live. This monument represents a simple thing that every hero would do.

I personally think that as many people as possible should visit this meaningful and extra important place. Showing your care for what has happened always matters.

Write the name of the monument?

I recommend a monument which is devoted to World War II. Its name is "The part of Russian ground". It is located in Novorossiysk, Russia. The monument looks like a big triangle that has been thrown by the Germans a long time ago. On the left side of the building, there are sculptures of Russian soldiers, they were made of copper and had a green colour because of the copper material. There is an entrance to a triangle. After you climb up a long stair, you will see a capsule with ground from WWII's battle on Russian ground. Then you need to exit the building by living from exit. I recommend this monument for its great atmosphere and tragic history of this place.
